

RESEARCH WITH AND ABOUT COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

April 2020 – June 2022 Request for Proposals

Overview and Program Goals

The Indiana Campus Compact Research With and About Community Engagement funding opportunity will support original research aimed at empirically exploring community engagement initiatives and organizational change at institutions of higher education in Indiana or the effect community engagement has on students' success during or after college. Funded research will support Indiana Campus Compact's goal to "increase rigorous and deep assessment...of community engagement's collective impact on the challenges facing Indiana" and beyond. This funding opportunity seeks to connect community-engaged scholars, both within higher education and community organizations, with individuals from institutional research or effectiveness offices as a means of supporting their research efforts.

Currently, there is only a small amount of published research each year that explores the relationship between the type of community engagement experience (e.g., course-based service-learning, community-based undergraduate research, co-curricular community engagement) and aspects of student success (e.g., retention and persistence, civic-mindedness, success beyond graduation). Further research is also needed on the relationship between community engagement practices and organizational change at institutions—higher education, community organizations, and local communities as a whole. Additionally, we seek to support the development of a diverse stream of published research outputs, both traditional and non-traditional in nature, documenting the research on community-engaged and community-based teaching and learning practices and its connection to institutional change and student success.

The overall goals of the program include:

1. Increase the amount of original research documenting the collective impact of community engagement practices on the challenges facing Indiana.
2. Increase the number of published research outputs, traditional and non-traditional, that document research on community-engaged and/or community-based teaching and learning practices and their connection to institutional change and/or student success.
3. Strengthen partnerships between community-engaged scholars, both within higher education and community organizations, and institutional research and effectiveness professionals aimed at increasing research about institutional community engagement practices.

The Research With and About Community Engagement grant seeks to fund two types of research projects:

1. Original research that is in partnership with community organizations or community members and is focused on topics, issues, or questions that arise from the community, partnering organization or community at large, and because the community has determined they are important, relevant, or timely. This type of research is commonly referred to as community-based research or community-based participatory research (see Frabutt, & Graves, 2016; Israel, et al., 2008; Strand, et al., 2003; & Viswanathan, et al., 2004 for common definitions).
2. Original research that is about the impact of community engagement on organizational change at the institution, both higher education and/or community organization institutions, and the impact it has on the institution's stakeholders.
